

Elective Description:

Text Response

The primary educational objective of the Yale Infectious Disease elective rotation is to provide Internal Medicine residents with a scholarly environment for learning the evaluation and management of a broad range of community acquired and nosocomial infectious disease problems. Residents participate as active members of the consultative and training program in Infectious Diseases West Haven V.A. Medical Center. This includes daily work rounds, daily attending rounds, microbiology rounds four times a week, two weekly clinical conferences and one didactic conference. In addition, residents may have the opportunity to evaluate patients in the outpatient ID/HIV clinics.
