

Pulmonary Consult at YNHH

Last Modified: 04/11/2013

Elective Description:

The Yale New Haven Medical Center (YNHH) consult elective in Pulmonary is designed to provide residents an in-depth knowledge of respiratory diseases through consults on the patient care floors and through didactic sessions and directed reading. Residents become an integral part of the Pulmonary and Critical Care (PCCM) Section consult service, working with the attending and PCCM fellow(s). From two to six new consults on average are seen daily and residents are assigned their own patients. Formal didactic lectures are given on Tuesday mornings at 8:00 a.m. at the Section Research Conference as well as on Wednesday afternoons at 3:00-5:00 p.m. at the Yale State Chest Conference. Also, a Tumor Board Conference is held on Monday mornings at 7:30 a.m., and residents are encouraged to attend. Residents are expected (1) to learn the differential diagnosis and treatment of respiratory disorders, (2) to learn to interpret pulmonary function tests and (3) to learn to read a chest radiograph and understand the essentials of a chest CT scan.
